

MEET THE HUMANITIES TEAM

Marie-Clare McMenemy - Teacher of Psychology

After studying Biology at Kings' College London, I decided to work as an editor/writer for medical publications. I ended up at The Lancet, which publishes a lot of cutting-edge research. Eventually I swapped London for Sussex and realised my ambition to train as a teacher. After teaching for 10 years I went back to Uni, this time Sussex University, to study for a Master's Degree in Psychology. The current pandemic has taught us all the importance of Science and Psychology and I am very excited to be able to teach the subjects I love so much, at this critical time, and to a new generation of Haywards Heath College students.

Charlie Richardson - Teacher of History and Politics

Hello! I am Charlie, a history and politics teacher here at Haywards Heath College. I have a vested interest in 19th and 20th century history, as well as the ever-changing story of British politics. I believe the study of history allows us to understand the story of human civilisation to see where we have come from to the present day, and the study of politics to gain a wide insight into the workings of today's British and American political systems and governments.

Jo Tipping - Teacher of Geography and Environmental Science

I have enjoyed teaching A-level geography for nearly 20 years, teaching in state secondary schools, private schools, post-16 colleges and special needs schools. I believe in encouraging students to reach their potential. I am a firm believer that geography is about bringing the 'real-world' into the classroom, debating complex local, national, and global issues whilst using creative teaching methods and technology to explain physical and environmental processes.
